After 20 years of corporate experience, leadership in middle management and management of international projects with a focus on reorganization, Paul Weißhaar is certain:

"Transformation is only sustainably successful if the changes are lived by all employees."

In his work as a senior consultant, Weißhaar has mastered the successful combination of company orientation and employee interests and the adaptation of theoretical models to practice.

In doing so, he combines his broad methodological knowledge, current scientific findings and decades of experience as an employee and manager. Thanks to his rhetorical skills, Weißhaar adapts precisely to his clientele and manages to convey complex topics in an efficient and individually understandable way.

Starting out in production, he was promoted to become the youngest "outstanding work" site manager at the aviation group AIRBUS at the age of 26 and has subsequently managed several hundred employees in disciplinary and multifunctional teams across disciplines.

Weißhaar has been a Senior Consultant at permitto since 2008. As a trainer and coach, he supports companies and public institutions in areas such as leadership and team development, personnel selection and the implementation of corporate culture in leadership and cooperation.
